

I have been a listener/supporter of KLOVE radio since it began airing here several years ago. Before that, I supported KWBI, which ran on the same frequency (91.1 in metro Denver area). Having a listener-supported, family-friendly radio station has blessed our family. As parents, we never have to worry about the type of sexually explicit or off-color jokes or song lyrics that children might hear - not to mention that WE don't like the typical DJ banter found on most other radio stations. The community has benefitted from this programming as well, as people hear about classes, concerts, seminars, etc. available (often free-of-charge) to help deal w/ the stresses and pain of today's world. The station has played a major role in promoting local canned food drives - one of the largest Thanksgiving outreach programs in the country began through this station encouraging listeners to reach out to those in need. Please don't allow LPFM broadcasters to take over the stations using FM translators. So many people would lose one of the most encouraging resources available to them! People esp. in the smaller communities served by FM translators have a great need; please keep this family-friendly option open to them! Thank you.
